Figures can be differentiated by touch thanks to the different heads

Making trouble is fun

Play follows the well-known simple Pachisi rules. But the game board has less fields and each player only two figures. This makes the length of the game much shorter! The play figures are easy to grasp and the indented fields means they won't fall over. This means that the game is perfect for people with limited fine motor skills and those who can't concentrate for longer periods. The heads of the play figures also have differing shapes. This means that players with visual impairments can also recognise their figures by touch. Contents: Board made from birch wood (25,5 x 25,5 cm), 8 counters Ø 2,5x H 5,5), 2 dices (1 - 3 spots and 1 - 6 spots) and instructions. Players: 2 - 4. Age: 4 years and up.

A Monochord Monolini

Make relaxing sounds without needing any musical experience. The Monochord Monolini is perfect for sound massages, meditation and therapy: melodious tones are easily created by strumming fingers over the strings – and gentle vibrations can be felt. Thanks to its low weight the Monochord can be easily laid on the tummy or legs to play, and is thus perfect for wheelchair users or bedridden people. It can also be used as an accompaniment for singing. Equally suitable for work with children and older adults. Recommended standard tuning: tune 19 blank strings to c' (possible range: a-c'), tune both bass strings to c (A-c). Accessories: 1 carry bag with adjustable length strap, 1 tuner, 1 tuning key, spare strings, 1 pair of wooden sticks, 1 set of instructions. Material: ash and cherry wood.

Transmit sound vibrations to the body

D Slit drums

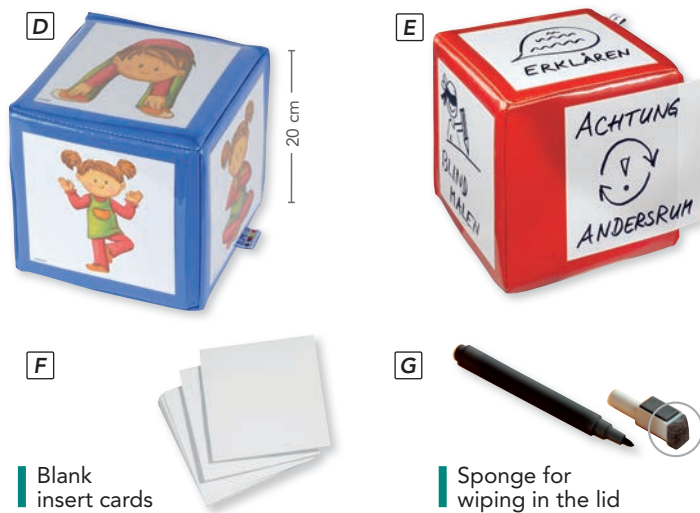

Children lie on their stomach, side or back on these tuned slit drums. Hitting the drum in different ways creates various interesting tone variations, which transmit to the whole body as sound vibrations. This lets the children physically experience the tones, which is very relaxing. The slit drums are used effectively in music therapy, e.g. against hyperactivity, and also when working with children. Tuning: G or D pentatonic. Material: padauk wood with pine body. Each with mallet and side feet for horizontal use. Tuned.
