

Practical

“Help me do it myself!”

Children have a deep urge towards independence.

The practical life exercises directly support independence to a high degree. Children learn by imitation, expand their field of activity and area of action, and acquire fundamental skills. The exercises are a direct invitation for children to actively deal with their environment.

The objects have been chosen in such a manner that the objective is clearly recognizable by the child and is perceived as a reason for action. The initially clumsy movements become confident and harmonic.

The possibility of self-control satisfies and encourages a discretionary number of repetitions.

The children’s movements and focused actions are playing the main role in the practical life exercises. The actual benefits of the work move to the background.

Maria Montessori assumes that the practical life exercises have a positive impact on personality development.

Dressing Frames

Dressing Frames

With the dressing frames, the motor function of the fingers and eye-hand coordination can be excellently promoted. When opening and closing the different types of fasteners repeatedly, precision and diligence are key. Besides learning indispensable skills for practical life, the children take a step towards independence at the same time. The sturdy wooden dressing frames are covered with durable cotton and/or heavy duty imitation leather. The cover is always single-colored, so the children can concentrate on the fasteners and are not distracted by color patterns. Dimensions: 30 x 30 cm.

Work Rugs

Most of the activities can take place on a work rug, which limits the child's work space. Distractions are avoided and children learn to respect the space of others around them when they are provided with a limited work space. In addition, the limited work space, provided by a work rug, directs the attention to the material itself.
